

ENTREPRENEURIAL INTENTION AMONG TERTIARY STUDENTS

Kwaku Amofah

Friday 31 January 2020, at 11:00 am
Via Bicocca degli Arcimboldi 8 MILANO
Aula Seminari del Di.SEA.DE n. 4066, 4° Floor – Build U7

Working papers:

- Entrepreneurial intentions among MBA students;
- Going down memory lane in the application of ajzen's tpb model to measure entrepreneurial intention: an SEM-PLS Approach;
- Testing the entrepreneurial intention model on spanish and italian university students
- A cross-country comparative analysis of the role of university education in shaping entrepreneurial intention.

Abstract: Kwaku Amofah is a PhD Student in Law and Business Administration at the University of Lleida, Spain and currently a Visiting PhD researcher with the Erasmus + Program at the University of Milano Bicocca under the supervision of Prof. Alessandro Capocchi. Kwaku is currently working on his PhD thesis, entitled 'Entrepreneurial Intention among University Students' and his vision is to bridge the gap between Students' entrepreneurial intentions and practice. Kwaku has local and international publications to his credit and has won an award in conference presentation in Ghana and an 'Excellence in Research Award' awarded by Clute Institute in the United States of America. He also presented in Florida, USA at a Conference organised by the United States Association for Small Business and Entrepreneurship (USASBE), last year.